Deathgod - I agree that a grenadier is an excellent weapon - but a flametrower is also very good. In a tunnel, a skilled grenadier would probably kill a flamer, but out in the open - the flamer slaughters grenadiers. Anti infantry - the flamer generally has the advantage. Even a n00b can use a flamer effectively, but a grenadier is a skill weapon. Grenades are also more effective against vehicles - but again its a skill weapon - many of your shots would miss a moving target (mammys and harvesters dont count), also its effective range is midrange, so you cant get too close. Grenadiers really come into their own on building attacks from the outside - a pair of grenadiers can knock out a building from the outside early on if it is not repaired - and it gets you a lot of points. My personal preference is the grenadier, but i would never ever write off the flamethrower. I am deadlier with the grenade than even the shotgun at close range on in tunnels. But if there was a tank blockade outside my base on field for example - i could do a lot more damage with a flamer than a grenadier, partly because the stupider drivers tend to ignore the flamer.
