when playing gdi i happened upon a stealth tank that was behind our tiberium refinery. the driver was out repairing it and obviously didn't see me. i quickly jumped in and the guy just kept repairing it while dodging my attempts to run him over..lol.. anyway, i thanked him for the curious, professional service of "my" new stealth and headed down the road to do some harm being shot at all the while by my own guys (thank god ff is turned off! it's ok though, i've done it too. sometimes it takes a few seconds to realize that it's a friendly stolen vehicle) it was the city map and there are tons of places for a stealth to hide and i did just that. i'd let the enemy vehicles go by and start ripping them up from behind. often they wouldn't know what was hitting them, taking the normal evasive action of moving back and forth, but never turning around. finally i went to the well once too often and got behind a ma and opened fire, but i didn't see the stealth that was accompanying him and finally lost "my" stealth. it was the most fun i've ever had in a stealth tank and i was gdi at the time..
