If you stick around the base you will only place well if you are being attacked a lot and you are one of the few repairing. Its usually those games you lose so if you do a good job you may only lose a couple points. If your team wins it usually means the other side attacked less so if you were back at the base the whole time you won't get many points.If I'm playing as Engineer I tend to start out as a field medic/mechanic and get points that way and then if we are being attacked stay back at the base later in the game. It depends on the momentum of the game though.I also mine the MCT's sometimes but it depends who is on your team, sometimes you have teammates who are proxy mine crazy, so it is not worth the effort to place them as they disappear soon after.[
