Wait a second...I know what you're talking about...It doesn't show the extension because the computer knows what it is...This is a window's option:Open up Windows Explorer, and go to some folder, click on Folder Options in the Tools menu. Click on the View tab and go down to where it says "Hide file extensions for known file types", uncheck that. Now it will show the extensions for all file types. Click ok/applyYour welcome
