ATI has also release DirectX 9 drivers for 2k and XP, and supposedly some new one for the rest of the windows line, but no DX9 support. You can also download a public beta of DirectX 9 from microsoft, but it expires in march. This isn't a problem for me since I format my hard drive about twice a month. Installing DX9 on my GF2GTS actually gave me a good 400 extra 3dmarks. from ~3400 to ~3900. Maybe I'll install these new drivers and see how it goes
