GDI forces have recently established a base in Siberia, due to fact that many routes that lead to Nod bases pass through that area. The Antarctica Base, as it was named, would be there for espionage and to supply the GDI troops and tanks that would eventually pass through those routes. Nod figured out the Antarctica Base and it's purpose, now they know GDI probably have some good source of informations inside the Antarctica Base mainframes, and now they will attempt to stole the data. First step of Nod operation to steal the data from GDI mainframes was successful - All defensive systems are now offline - The Power Plant have been hacked and no longer can supply power to other structures or units. Before Nod could actually obtain the data inside the mainframes, GDI engineers were able to save the intelligence data inside a disk, and delete the sources inside the mainframes, to avoid Nod to steal it. Once started, the operation can't stop. Nod will send all units near Siberia to the Antarctica Base to obtain the disk. Korean Spy Planes have spotted SSM Launchers near our base, wich means Nod may use Nuclear Strikes if they fail to recover the disk. Reinforcements are on the way, commander, but they might take too long to save us. Nod ground troops are already in our base, and stole half of our weaponry, wich means we don't have many things to use against tanks and aircrafts that are probably on it's way to finish with Antarctica. What will you do commander? Destroy the base by yourself to avoid top secret information to be in wrong hands? Or fight until the end of this great war?
