PointlessAmbler Often times sentences that only have one clause are the best. Actually, it's really a matter of opinion, but the general consensus is that the best writing involves a variety of sentence structures so as to not become repetitive and boring. The only things you'll find that are written with only one-clause sentences are children's primers. ("Is Spot under the basket? Is Spot in the closet? Where is Spot? Spot is on the sofa!")

Also, to flyingfox:

I just noticed you're from Scotland, so I might have been wrong to correct you. I don't know the punctuation/grammar rules of British English, but I know they're not exactly the same as those of American English. So for all I know, what you said may be correct under British rules.
