I find it strange that Aircraftkiller takes offence for people using his nickname online.

Aircraftkiller, you should try living with a first name, like Willem in a country, where there are thousands of "funny" songs about persons with that name. How many times have I not heard people saying "Hey Willempie" or *starts singing* "Willempie hoor je overal....", "Hup daar is Willem met de waterpomp tang" *stops singing*. I don't find that offensive in "real life", although sometimes I find it strange that people know my name while I don't know theirs.

And even though you hate the nickname, why change it. You are long enough in this community I think to know that doing something as this will only start making people either make fun of it, or start getting annoyed by it, instead of what ever your goal is with it. If someone in real life who I don't know would suddenly force me to call him by all his titles, even though I'm not talking to him but just about him, I would be upset.
