heh, even the Canadian Air Cadet program has been afflicted by this. Most transition occurred during my stint as an Air Cadet, and just a few years prior.

One thing that we can no longer do, is something I found very effective at correcting some drill flaws. When performing the "at ease" movement, if we didn't have our fingers straight, they got rapped with whatever the instructor happened to be holding. It's not overly cruel, but still highly effective.
