You don't understand how those resolutions work. They are REFERING to previous resolutions before they make the resolution they are writing. It is the way they proof themselves so they don't have to put up with the beaucratic crap associated with "Well, where is your evidence?"

And that still doesn't negate the authority of the Security Council. So you're still wrong. Oh, and another thing: Ad Hominem is only funny when it's someone witty doing it. You are not.
