I wasn't in the game, but looking at the movie, it looks more like he is just fooling around with his abilities then really using them to win the game. Like all those nuke and ion beacons at the same time.

Actually I find nothing wrong with playing like this. Westwood did a bit the same thing with the beta-testers, since they used the extra characters and the beta testers didn't know what was happening to them.

Oh, so spawning like 7 flame tanks when his team was losing, he just let them sit there and was like "I AM ONLY TESTING THIS OUT"

True, be if he really cared so much about winning, I think he could have won easy on his own, instead of organising a rush. Gaining all the points on his own.
