Well, I have a really spyware problem [at least I think it's spyware.] that I must remove from my computer. It affects Google Image searches. When I go to <http://www.google.com/> like normal, everything works fine, and then I click on the Images tab, and I get redirected through <http://www.safe-site.com/> to some website like NationalGeographic.com. Needless to say, this makes it quite impossible to perform google image searches, and drive me right up the wall in anger. If anyone knows anything about this, i would greatly appreciate some information. I always get the same effect with IE, Opera, and Mozilla Firefox.

But, tragically, spyware has screwed IE so far to hell, it's never coming back unless I re-format both my harddrives.

Any help is much appreciated
