I just find it pathetic that this is going on. If someone makes a script don't think you're automatically entitled to it, but in the same respect, if you make a script don't keep it from everyone because you think you're the only one capable of using it right.

If someone wants to keep their new discovery and scripts for their mod, let them. It's their choice. That's what sets a mod apart from all the others. If everyone uses the same features, what makes that one mod special and fresh?

If you have a script that's beneficial to the game no matter what it is then you should give it out. There's no point in making something beneficial if you plan on keeping it to yourself. It's like finding the cure for cancer, but you choose not to give it out to medical clinics and such. What's the point in finding the cure?
