Thats spooky stuff. It could have been photoshopped, but who would go out, take like 30 cool pictures, and then photoshop a zombie in some? And if they were reference pics for an amateur film, they wouldn't have taken pics while running, or with the camera at ground level.

Also, the question of whether the first pic I reposted was a painting or something, who would have a painting in that shape, in the top of an observation tower, on the ceiling? I think its probably a mirror, though I can't really explain why that would be there either.

Reference pics could have been taken while running, as a note that the camera should be moving especially quickly in that scene. They could also be at ground level because it builds suspense, and the movie camera should be there, too.

And if that mirror is on the ceiling, wouldn't it mean that the guy shown in the mirror would be lying face-down?
