
Subject: And people want to vote for this guy?
Posted by Javaxcx on Tue, 24 Aug 2004 10:36:46 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

cowmisfitJavaxcx

I don't support the war because it was illegal.

Tell me how going after someone who aided the murder of 3000+ Dead american citizens is illegal??? Or by going after a son of a bitch who threatens us with weapons of mass destruction for 16+ years and used them on his people and threats to use against his neighbor nations is illegle? Tell that load of bullshit to the family's who know those who died on 9/11, im sure they'll understand. :rolleyes:

You know, a good friend of mine once said that Liberals are known to be more emotional, and that Republicans are known to be logical thinkers. You, my simple "I see the world in two shades" friend, could not be more of a liberal by that definition.

I want to make something very clear to you, and everyone else who seems to think that this world is governed by "what you think is right": YOUR MORALITY DOES NOT ABSOLVE YOU FROM THE LAW.

Saddam Hussein had absolutely nothing to do with September 11th. No one could make the validated conclusion before 19 March 2003, and no one can make that claim now. The entire fucking point is utterly moot. If FOXnews told you otherwise, I highly suggest you start looking at other, or multiple news networks to corroborate.

I think you're going to realize that international law doesn't care what happened when Saddam said "omgf i h8 u guys i h8 u" in 1990. As for the Russian informant ordeal -- well, I guess you guys were played by the Kremlin, weren't you? Did you ever find all the imminent tools Iraq had planned on using on you? I mean, wouldn't FOXnews just divebomb on that? As for using weapons of mass destruction on the Kurds: What gives you the RIGHT, the LEGAL right to go and drop the mother of all coup d'etats on his nation without permission from the United Nations? Your constitution? HA. Show me where it says "In the case that a sovereignty uses military force on another sovereignty, we, the United States, are hereby given the exhaulted right to go and fuck them up and play God with their country and government".

Guess what kid. I don't give a rat's ass about the United States "international policy". As a Canadian, I'll recognize the actions of the United States on an international level in terms of the United Nations. Here's the clincher: Your president is a terrorist for what he did to Iraq. No, I'm not talking about all the humanitarian responsibilities he was OBLIGED to distributing. No way. He is a terrorist for his unlawful coercion of the Iraqi government -- however terrible it was-- without explicit and direct permission from the United Nations. Like it or lump it kid, you guys signed the Charter, and so did Iraq. You're BOTH under those laws and nothing says in the Charter gives the United States the world to play with and the legal right to police it.

Oh, and just in case you forgot: Usama Bin Laden thought what he was going was good too. So did the 19 men in those planes. Take a wild guess who does too.
