It's actually quite funny as I'm the only apparent Brit here as far as I know, I told him Liverpool isn't far from me yet London is. Why can't he go on multimap or something and actually look about the size and layout of a country before he slags it off? I mean seriously there must be someone in the United States that can understand that London isn't the country, surely there must be one?

Incidentally, the cultural and economic differences between the north and the south have almost split this place in 2. It is like a different country down there, only they speak more english..
