

---

Subject: Damn that's a big protest.
Posted by Javafx on Mon, 30 Aug 2004 02:50:51 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

NodbuggerI never said it isn't illegal if you get caught.

I didn't say you DID. You've implied it every time you talk about the lack of illegality despite the overwhelming evidence stating otherwise.

Quote:If we were speeding and ever cop in the world knew about and they did nothing then there isn't a problem.

You were STILL speeding. That is a violation of the law. Just because you don't suffer the consequences doesn't mean you didn't violate the law that says "you may not speed". Stop arguing in a circle.

Quote:When the entire UN knows we are doing something and they don't do anything there is no problem.

See above. Try, PLEASE try and connect the dots. I know it's not your forte.

Quote:And yes you are interpreting the law.

Oh the irony.

Quote:The only part you can eve refute in any resolution is

"Reaffirming the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iraq, Kuwait, and the neighboring States,
"

We did not violated the territorial integrity.

Quote:sovereignty-
Complete independence and self-government.
A territory existing as an independent state.

First of all, I don't need to refute that statement. In fact, you've tried to refute it every time you post that this war was legal according to international law. You've failed, by the way.

Oh yeah, your definition supports my claim that you violated the sovereignty of Iraq. No sane person would disagree.

Quote:As of now they are completely independent and they have always been a territory existing as an independent state.

No one cares about that when we're talking about inherent illegality. This problem goes back to March 19th, 2003. You know, when you launched the campaign to get those WMDs didn't appear in stockpiles and were refuted by the Intelligence Reports? Also, the same time when Saddam was legally, and officially recognized as the sovereign head of Iraq. Before, of course, you blew up part of the nation, took him out of power illegally, and instituted a representative government of your choosing.

---