It was an intentional feature in the game, and it is not cheap or unfair. It isn't that hard to spot a beacon being placed on the pedestal- it is placed so that it is easy to see- if you're Nod, you can even watch the twerp planting the thing from halfway across the base. If you lose to a ped beacon, well, good for the other team. And if you don't like the idea of your whole base being smeared in one strike, just play in a server with the option turned off. If you want it to happen later in the game, set the starting cash low. It's that simple.
