I heard skype was looking into making long distance calls cheaper. The idea was you first connect with your pc over the internet to one of there pc's, on the other end of the world and after that the pc use the normal phone line to dial the person you want.

You still had to pay a bit, but since it doesn't cost anything to connect to a diffrent pc over the internet it would cost a lot less then the regular phone cost.

But this website has BS all over it.
