

---

Subject: Answer this question

Posted by ingram091 on Sun, 12 Sep 2004 08:53:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Liberty equates to Autonomy, which leads to the betterment of society. If everyone is equal, there would still have to be Some unequal to run it all. or it would die. I submit the movie Harrison Bergeron (1995).

<http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/tg/detail/-/6303801919/103-4890724-7831840?v=glance> rent it some time. It is defiantly something worth watching if this kind of thing interests you.

Quote:All men are not created equal. It is the purpose of the Government to make them so." This is the premise of the Showtime film adaption of Kurt Vonnegut's futuristic short story Harrison Bergeron. The film centers around a young man (Harrison) who is smarter than his peers, and is not affected by the usual "Handicapping" which is used to train all Americans so everyone is of equal intelligence.

Link to the short story that inspired the movie.

<http://www.fortunecity.com/meltingpot/stelmo/248/harrison.html>

---