Yeah, my house is in Foley, Baldwin county. There wasn't much house damage, only 3 spots where the sheetrock from the ceiling caved in, insulation everywhere. Also bunch of shingles and 10 foot branches all up in the yard, half of the trees in the yard are sideways. Gulf Shores was only known as 'Gulf' for awhile, and there was no way to get east of Pensecola since most of the bridges were out. I went to Mobile to my sister's house to stay, and after the storm here neighborhood looks like a jungle with all the leave and branches everywhere, or poles cut in half and free floating by their power lines.

Oh yeah also today Bush came down to survey the damage and pretty much said "looks pretty bad".
