

---

Subject: Your religion?

Posted by Nukelt15 on Wed, 29 Sep 2004 21:21:38 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

There is not any way of saying whose beliefs are correct. Maybe they all are, or maybe none of them are at all- every religion in history has claimed to hold the keys to eternity and salvation, but the only way you'll ever find out for sure is to die and see what happens.

That said, I, while I do believe in life after death, do not believe in the existence of deities. I also do not believe there was ever a "beginning" of time, or that there can ever be an "end." Time simply exists. Good and Evil certainly exist, but they aren't quite as polarized for me as they appear to be for many others.

Believing in something is important- but that something could pretty much be anything that you feel gives your life meaning. It isn't quite as simple as telling someone they believe in nothing, because- well, they are obviously capable of some form of thought, therefore they must have some kind of beliefs; to believe in nothing is to not exist at all. Perhaps their idea of what constitutes a religion is different than your own.

---