

---

Subject: Kerry did it again...

Posted by Fabian on Tue, 05 Oct 2004 20:39:49 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

hydra1945Don't you see that the playing field was level to begin with? Last I checked, it's 2004, not 1954. Blacks are not discriminated against in today's day and age like they were fifty years ago.

Yes, they do operate under the assumption that "all blacks are stupid." They assume that the black person applying for that job or applying to go to that college or what have you has not had the same education a white person applying for the same job/to the same college has had. Put simply, they think blacks are dumber than whites because of their color, so blacks should be given special treatment in the application process.

I thought I told you I don't agree with affirmative action. Oh well.

Anyway, their theory is that people from the 1950's etc definitely had a disadvantage in getting an equal education. This puts today's youths at a disadvantage because their parents couldnt help them with homework, or didnt have the money to send their kids to college.

---