Not exactly. The Add/Remove software knows it's a separate program, but it gives the size of the files/folders in the folder the program is in, not the size of the program itself. That's why they have the same size, since they are both in the same folder.

For instance, Renegade just installed is just around 900MB, and we all know RenGuard is around 2mb (give or take).

If you add maps, Renegade is still around 900MB, but the folder is larger, because of the maps, etc. Add/Remove will report your Renegade/RenGuard's size as the initial program size, plus anything you've added into the folder as well.

Not an important bug, but not helpful either.
