well, if you like norton hogging about what, 5 or 6 processes on your computer, just so it can autoupdate, check virus', sit in the system tray, and startup, and then... not catch every virus thats out there, NOT block those annoying "you must install this software" virus', as well as not detect virus' in system restore & dllcache directories, then by all means, use Norton.

i was a Norton System Works Corporate Edition user for the last 4 years, dropped it as soon as i found something that detected virus', and also only has ONE lite weight process.
