Subject: The WMD and terrorist ties that didn't exist...or did they?
Posted by Hydra on Sat, 09 Oct 2004 21:14:59 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

warrantoI never ONCE stated that I wasn't "angry" at Iraq for breaking the law themselves. However, that is a moot point, and only shows a desperate attempt by you to avoid the topic at hand. It was NOT America's responsibility to police the world, regardless of the UNs ineptness to do its job. Iraq broke the law as well, yes. I never once stated otherwise. However, America broke the law as well, and no amount of "Look, he did it too!" is going to change that.
America broke no law when it invaded Iraq as a protection of its own national security. Terrorism is a very real threat. Iraq has had a history of aiding terrorists.

If anything, America was enforcing the law Saddam broke.

Quote:I am NOT trying to "weaken the force that removed him", however as I continuously state, that DOES NOT mean America didn't break any laws as well.
You're attacking the reasons for invading Iraq and removing Saddam. You are trying to remove the force that is finally getting rid of that brutal dictator.

Again, I state, America broke no international law.

Quote:No the UN does not have an obligation to put Saddam back into power. What they would have an obligation, if any, to do would to discipline America for its actions
If it was indeed found to be unlawful for America to invade Iraq for the reasons it did, then the U.N. would have not only an obligation to discipline America for its wrongdoings but to rectify the damage done to Iraq. What was the "damage" done? The removal of Saddam's regime.

Quote:but you know as wel as I do that the UN won't do anything.
Right, because the U.N. would most likely lose the 85% of funds America provides for its operation.

Quote:...wow. I can't believe you think everyone that is not an American is a terrorist.

Quote:You did say that after all...
Quote:Quote:America is a threat to people right now.
If you mean terrorists when you say people, you're right.
...Wow, I can't believe you got THAT out of what I said.

You're smart enough to know I did not mean "you're a terrorist if you're not American!" in that statement. I shouldn't even have to explain it to you.

Quote:After all, America has the potential to launch massive nuclear srikes at ever country in the world, so they are a threat to everyone in the world. So does China, Russia, Israel, Great Britain, Pakistan, and India (the former states of the Soviet Union and Russia more than anyone else). I guess they would be threats to the rest of the world, too, going by that definition.

Quote:What is more amazing, however, is that YOU actually think everyone in the world is a terrorist.

You're smart enough to know I did not mean that.

C'mon, Warranto, that's not like you.
Quote:We can only hope you're never in charge, because I'm sure you would be that person that DID launch the WMD's America possesses.
Now what the hell gave you that idea?

NodbuggerYou are fucking retarded.
Nodbugger, though the rest of your post is correct, Warranto is anything but retarded.