In the last few months, the clanwars.cc league has been something close to dead. Only one or two clans would really play competitively each month. However, at the start of December, about four or five top clans who hadn't been playing for a while, all agreed to come back, play competitively and inject a bit of life into the league.

I'm basically saying, if there was a good time to take a clan onto a competitive level, that time is now.
