

---

Subject: Push Ups

Posted by flyingfox on Sun, 05 Dec 2004 05:09:03 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

everybody is living life as they go, so yeah they will kill over it..as for the reply above. can I ask you a question? i think you said a few replies back you were a christian.....what if, and this is just if....the bible was not taught to people anymore? what if I grew up without even knowing it existed, to have parents staunch enemies of the entire belief in religion. would I be punished in heaven for not believing in god, when i did not know about him in the first place? all it would take would be a lifetime of about eighty years without anybody speaking of it or having versions of it on their website...what happens then? when everybody has forgotten about it and it cannot be taught anymore? we RELY on it being taught, then we are given the choice of choosing to believe in it or not.

God would know that humans are very selfish and would quicker believe what he can see rather than what he would at first consider a phantom, somebody in a story. so then why are we given the choice if it is an absolute truth he exists? don't get me wrong, i've said it before I like some parts of the bible, like the stories it tells of. but it's got more holes in it than a pair of my old socks.

---