Personally, I'm an athiest, but I really do want more people to believe in something-- I sure wish I could.

Why tell people that there is no God? Why attack a religion? If they do worship their gods, then they obviously want or need to, so these silly arguments will get you nowhere. Many people use religion as their hope, their reason for life. Why would you try and take that away? When it comes right down to it, religious arguments just end up being "you're wrong!" "no, you are!" contests.
