hydra1945I think you all are paranoid in saying it's a hoax.

Roger that.

I checked my (old) AOL email account and I got the letter too. I get all of the EA spam on that email account. Guys, there's so much evidence to prove that this is real that you might as well wait and see what happens, instead of going on about how it's a hoax. You wouldn't like being teased later on if it actually does happen.

More evidence: There is a link at the bottom that removes you from their mailing list, and the URL is on fun.ea.com. That server still exists. No duh you guys are going to get nothing if you try going to fun.ea.com... :rolleyes:
