Two years ago was the last time i had a BSOD in XP pro (system stop).

If it happens again write down the info thats on the screen, it should give you a pretty detailed summary of where a problem occured and even mention filenames usually.

For me back then it was related to the drivers of the network card Tamarack TC6010 10/100mbit networkcard, emailed the makers of the card and they sent me an updated driver then after a while.

I dont know if it has to do with your Network drivers but mostlikely its a driver of something fucking up somewhere.
