
Subject: As if we could pretend this wouldn't come around...
Posted by SuperFlyingEngi on Tue, 21 Dec 2004 03:06:36 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Cowmisfit:

I suppose you chose to go with the latter.

I don't know why I'm wasting my time on such a pathetic case, but I don't have much to do right now. First, my parents. Both got above a 1400 on their SATs, and my dad regularly works side by side with the top scientific brains in the physics textbook industry as a chief development editor. [Clue for the clueless: Important role.] You also can't declare your pretend lala belief that my parents are below the average intelligence level to rest within the level of "fact."

Now, why do I hate America? Because I don't blindly follow our "leaders" like you do? No, that's why I love America. Again, I reiterate:

"Dissent is the highest form of patriotism" -Thomas Jefferson

Now, I'm betting you no Arab fundamentalist fighters are reading Renegade Forums to listen to bitches like you.

I care for our soldiers. Don't say I don't. I don't want them in this war. I want every one of them out of the Middle East right now. I never wanted any of them to be there. I never did, wanted, would, want or ever will want ANY of our soldiers to be hurt.

j-balls430:

First topic: One of the stupidest things I've ever heard. The vast majority of the populace probably never once wrote a complaint to their officials, because they just don't care that much. And those in positions of public office aren't going to vote against any more money for our troops, they're going to vote against our troops being in active combat if the populace demands it. If the citizens of the United States believe our soldiers are in an unjust war, then they can bring them out of the unjust war. Although, since a big chunk of voters on election day were voting on "moral values," your group obviously doesn't care.

Terrorists and soldiers aren't the same thing. And that still doesn't justify torture. Are you saying it does? You're wrong. Read the article.

Nope, still wrong. The United States does not torture anyone. Well, until "President" Bush, we didn't.

Now, both of you have one last chance to get back on the topic of this article instead of attacking me ad hominem. If you're not going to address the article and instead try and throw your drivel at me, I quite frankly don't give a damn,
