Bad times... I just got back in from having to dent up my back bumper pushing my dad's Dodge Dakota into the garage. It wouldn't start and he was trying to get me to push it on foot back from up near some garbage cans where it was parked. He had it in neutral and didnt see that the parking break was on, and kept asking me why I couldn't push it. So finally he realized it was on and said oh here and pulled it not thinking and the truck jumped backward with the door open hitting our basketball hoop with the door and it made this loud crack and bent the door way past its stop. Now we have a door with all broken hinges and the truck won't start. The door is all scraped up and he also lost a wrench in the wheel well trying to take off the door. It was the only wrench we had the size to undo the bolts. I tell ya things arent going so well... Now we have to take it to a dealership to get it started and a bodyshop to fix the door and we're going to have an old scratched up truck for the price of a brand new computer or sod for around our new pool. This Whomps.

Just thought I'd share cause it has to do with my ride (and the denting up of the bumper there of )
