Get your education through the military. You CAN do that you know. And it is just as good, if not better than the one you're getting now. Working in intelligence and/or engineering still require you to complete your BCQ. So what are you waiting for?

I don't know about American policies, but here ours can be done part-time over the course of a year every other weekend or in a block session in the summertime. It's called "part-time reserves" because the military knows you have school and/or full time jobs to keep up with.
