

---

Subject: Survival kits?

Posted by Javaxcx on Wed, 26 Jan 2005 01:20:58 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

That's a dead end argument. You signed the Charter saying what you would and wouldn't do. Whether you like it or not, that Charter is a law recognized and ratified by many nations to keep relations peaceful BETWEEN nations.

The irony here is that by not adhering to said Charter, you would be violating contract laws that your own country has in place. So any way you cut it in trying to negate the validity of the law that YOU HELPED CREATE will still result with you in the wrong.

You may be lucky enough not to be punished for your crime. And so may France, Germany, and Russia. But the crime is still a crime nonetheless.

---