ok, now considering the number of cases where an innocent man had been wrongly convicted and subsequently killed, are you willing to be YOUR life that the man is not innocent?

Lets play the role-reveral shall we?

You're caught with the murder weapon in your hand after finding someone you know lying on the ground, dead. After a length trial, you are found guilty, even though you are innocent. You are the one being lead down to the execution room.

Tell me, if that was you, would you still say that the death penatly is worth it?
