icedog90If you actually read my post without blowing your eyes out of your sockets you'd realize that I didn't say you made tons of errors in this topic.

I didn't say you did.

"Grammar Nazi" isn't even the right name to call me since I'm not even talking about grammar. This has to do with apostrophes.

Oh I'm sorry. Will Punctuation or Spelling Nazi work?

What are these common mistakes I keep making? I'd like to see you point them out instead of going on about how I made more mistakes than you in my post. The only real mistake I made was when I accidentally put a comma in the wrong place. Wow, that really counts as a lot of mistakes. It wasn't even nearly as bad as yours.

First of all, I didn't make many mistakes.

Here are your mistakes:

Would you please get a new vocabulary other than "Grammar Nazi"? icon_rolleyes.gif

Just because YOU don't care doesn't mean everyone else thinks the same thing as you. I don't get what's wrong with America, so many people here use English incorrectly, while other languages in other countries have far less of the amount of mistakes we have. I'm not like "omg I want to piss you off by correcting you", it's "IF YOU CAN'T USE ENGLISH CORRECTLY, LEARN A DIFFERENT FUCKING LANGUAGE". Meaning, stop fucking abusing this language, or get the hell out.

1. In the first sentence, the question mark comes before the closing quotation mark.
2. "A vocabulary" is not correct. Vocabulary is a plural word. There is no singular form of it.
3. Period instead of comma after "America."
4. Comma before quotation mark after "you."
5. Comma after "like," before, "omg..."
6. Period after language, before quotation mark.

And your point is...? That doesn't have anything to do with English.

Well you did tell me to learn "A DIFFERENT FUCKING LANGUAGE."

"IF YOU CAN'T USE ENGLISH CORRECTLY, LEARN A DIFFERENT FUCKING LANGUAGE".

America as a whole doesn't make more mistakes than any other country. Thats a generalization with little or no evidence.

There are some differences in American English and UK english. Emphasize (ise) is one of them.

America: Color, Center

UK: Colour, Centre

There are more, but I can't think of them off the top of my head.
