Look, read, laugh at how silly you are. It's just the Internet, after all. I personally just take most everything with a bit of salt and continue with what I was doing before.

Example... I forget most things on the Internet from 5 seconds to 15 minutes. I don't harbor hate for some person I'll never meet, and I don't bother getting worked up over 99% of what I encounter online.

If you do, I seriously suggest you look into ways to find something better to do with your time... For your own sake. I can't imagine how you would act in reality if you allow little things like words on a computer monitor to make you incredibly mad and cause you to throw out "I hate you" over and over.
