

---

Subject: Tribute to Terry Shiavo

Posted by Walrus on Thu, 31 Mar 2005 23:44:17 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Terri did not suffer. And she does not need a tribute. She was dead 15 years ago, it's just taken this long for her body to die. She was in a hospice; you don't come back from those places, you go there to end your days in comfort and with dignity (this isn't the issue though).

The only reason any one gives a shit is because the media blew up the story to epic proportions.

God only know how many people die in conditions far worse then hers. And no one gives a shit about those people. I doubt you will ever go to a hospice and help people threw that tough time. People who are fully aware what is happening. And are in pain.

I feel for the poor souls who have no one. Who are dying in old folks homes and in hospices around the country, completely forgotten. It's not nice to watch someone die, you see. very few of them have the care or attention that Terri had in her fifteen years of not knowing what planet she was on.

I doubt the news in any country, fox or otherwise, will do a story about that.

This is not about Terri, it was about a persons will, the right of guardian ship, and the right to choose ones end.

I need a drink.

As the old saying goes. One Last Time.

---