Blazer has a job. I don't. I am currently in the process of interviewing with GoDaddy as a MySQL DBA. I scored very well on their thinking skills test and I interviewed with a potential future co-worker, but the hiring manager became unavailable so I have yet to talk to him. Howvever, I have confirmed (twice) with the recruiter that I'm not out of the running. He expects them to have everything decided within the next week or two.

However, at the end of the month, the server bill is due. I am considering consolidating servers a bit and getting rid of one that isn't very powerful. But that would still leave $400 to go. Thanks everyone for your contributions, no matter what the size.
