CrimsonflyingfoxThey need better methods of detection that people are using the program..

Like ESP? I don't understand. This person needs to make sure the name that RenGuard greets him as is the same name that he wants to play as.

What I mean is sometimes you will log in with the correct name but the server won't see that you are using renguard. It's happened to me but all I had to do was restart the program.
If the server side client had a different way of detecting that its clients were on renguard, it could eliminate this problem, like the one noodles is having now
