

---

Subject: Do You Think Fighting For President Bush Is Worth Your Life?

Posted by SuperFlyingEngi on Tue, 24 May 2005 02:22:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

bigejoe14 We're not fighting for President Bush. We're fighting for the protection of the United States and the freedom of the Middle East and it's people. But most importantly, we're fighting to defend the world.

I do hope you don't believe we were defending the world from Iraq... Because they're a greater threat now to the world than they ever were under U.N. sanctions. A civil war is at this point entirely inevitable, the 350 tons of RDx that was lost can destroy something like 10,000 commercial airliners, of which before we invaded, all of it was contained within a UN-regulated depot.

ACK! It's endlessly amusing to watch someone who has no major college degree, has no pilot's license nor has the ability to fly a fighter jet, and was never a governor of a major state call the President of the United States a dimwit.

What, may I ask, does the ability to fly a plane have to do with the ability to insult someone's intelligent quotient. Oh, that's right, it doesn't.

---