Yes, it does. The word fascism originates from Italy during the reign of Mussolini.

Mussolini quotes:

Quote:"If the bourgeoisie think they will find lightning conductors in us they are the more deceived; we must start work at once .... We want to accustom the working class to real and effectual leadership".

Sounds somewhat similar to Marx, doesn't it?

Quote:"Therefore I desire that this assembly shall accept the revindication of national trades unionism"

He's a good union guy, too. Sounds like many liberals.

Quote:"Fascism has taken up an attitude of complete opposition to the doctrines of Liberalism, both in the political field and in the field of economics".

His definition of liberalism being neo-liberalism, politics defined by people like Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher.

Progressives and the definition of them, what they did. They sound a lot like you, super fungal infection.

Quote:"Upon taking power in Washington, Wilson and the many other Southerners he brought into his cabinet were disturbed at the way the federal government went about its own business. One legacy of post-Civil War Republican ascendancy was that Washington's large black populace had access to federal jobs, and worked with whites in largely integrated circumstances. Wilson's cabinet put an end to that, bringing Jim Crow to Washington. Wilson allowed various officials to segregate the toilets, cafeterias, and work areas of their departments".

Hey, it's your buddy Woodrow Wilson! Wonder why he's racist... Oh wait, that's because he's a Progressive, which is a liberal by today's standards.

Wonder where Mussolini got his ideas?

Quote:"If we are to go forward we must move as a trained and loyal army willing to sacrifice for the good of a common discipline, because, without such discipline, no progress is made, no leadership becomes effective. We are, I know, ready and willing to submit our lives and property to such discipline because it makes possible a leadership which aims at a larger good".

Hey, that comes from Roosevelt...
