

---

Subject: Rap Discussion

Posted by cheesesoda on Sat, 28 May 2005 20:52:16 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Music is spiritual. It's not just something that I "like to listen to". Music is a great stress reliever and it puts adrenaline in my veins. If an artist doesn't give a flying fuck about their music other than it's pulling in money then it loses it's effect. I just don't like music when the root of it is greed. I mean, I see music much more than just another industry. Again, it's great that people are making money off of their talents, but to have money create your sound is just stupid. Artists changing their sound is just like me changing my personality because of some chick. I will remain true to myself, and I want the artists that I listen to to be true to their music/sound. Again, this is probably because I see music as spiritual and more than just another industry. You have your own opinion, and I'm not calling you stupid for having it, but I'm calling it as I see it, and I still feel that music today (especially rap) is bullshit. It's manufactured, and nobody has their individuality. The only genre I can say that has stayed true to their roots is Country music.

Again, I view music as more than just another industry. I want people to produce something that they enjoy producing. Of course I wouldn't put a product on the market if it sucks. That's not to say I won't commend someone for trying to make it by doing something they love.

Edit:

@Aircraftkiller:

first paragraph Again, it's great that people are making money off of their talents, but to have money create your sound is just stupid.

---