To have a strong democracy on a country, there is only one solution : it must be the result of the acts of the people of this country. And you all know it's true. (and don't bring me the argument about allies fighting nazis, it was different as it was a world war.)

This IS what the Iraqis want. They showed up in masses when the first elections were held, even through terrorists were threatening their lives if they dared to vote. We did not build Iraq's government in our image, just as the Afghans did. They were assisted by us to create a government system that would work for them. You're not hearing that they have a Constitution the same as ours, the checks and balances and all. They are building their own government based on Democracy.
