Crimson wrote on Sun, 12 June 2005 18:21 To answer pothead's question, YES, the Iraqis ARE fighting alongside us. You probably don't pay attention, but you'll hear "an Iraqi fighter did this", "an Iraqi fighter did that".

<http://www.cnn.com/2005/WORLD/meast/06/12/iraq.main/index.html> -- Describes something Iraqi police found

Further quotes from the article:

Insurgents attacked a minibus carrying Iraqi construction workers Saturday, killing 10 people and wounding three. Gunmen riding in two cars opened fire on the vehicle as it traveled between Latifiya and Yusufiya in Babil province, south of Baghdad. See, they're helping to rebuild!

A suicide bomber dressed as a police commando blew himself up Saturday in a group of Iraqi police Wolf Brigade commandos who had gathered for roll call, Iraqi police said. The blast killed three police commandos and wounded 17 others, police said. Oh look, they have Commandos

:biggrin:pothead, thats cute.

But you didn't answer the questions, All you did was proving that the Iraqis can't fight for themself.

Do you think its possible to kill all the insurgents and the people who follow saddam's reign.
