
Subject: Re: Quite possibly the best political cartoon ever.
Posted by SuperFlyingEngi on Tue, 14 Jun 2005 20:41:50 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Aircraftkiller wrote on Tue, 14 June 2005 15:19Ah, its racist tendencies come out yet again. Not only does he support the party that has Senator Byrd, the former KKK member and avowed mean mean black person hater in it, he also likes reading Tom Tomorrow cartoons that featured Condolezza Rice and Colin Powell being referred to as "House Niggas" in a very demeaning way.

Too bad it can't accept that the black people don't have to be confined to your little plantation to be your social slaves. When they escape from it, people like you find it prudent to bash them. Yes, that's a great strategy for you - bash the same minorities that you supposedly care about.

You're filth, super fungal infection.

You certainly wouldn't mind showing where they're referred to in that way, would you?

warrantoNope. Life is life, regardless of whose life it is. If you are going to say that the "destruction of underdevelop[ed fetuses]" is bad for one thing, then it applies to everything. There is no "life beings for animals at an eariler time than humans". If you are going to lable the eating of an endangered species as "killing" the animal, then the same thing applies to humans.

I'm not labelling it as killing the animal. I, personally, label it as killing the animal potentiante. Which is what needs to live to become an actual animal. That's the point of endangered species having protected eggs and such. Not because it's more ethical to not let them die. If that where the case, you couldn't buy chicken eggs at the store. But you can.

Crimson

So typical of Democrat 'humor'... it's not funny at all, not subtle. Whereas the comic posted at the beginning of this thread was subtle and clever.

Oh, please. The cartoon that started this thread said exactly what it was referring to. The most it did subtly was link two dissimilar topics, which is no great feat. I personally believe no one can glean much humor from political cartoons unless you agree with what it's trying to say. The closest I've come is chuckling at one cartoon in the National Review.
