Aircraftkiller wrote on Fri, 17 June 2005 22:58Why should you have to install loads of plugins, tweak the program for higher speeds, and do a bunch of other inane tasks because the program comes out inferior? Opera already browses the Internet in the best way possible without having to install a bunch of plugins and "extensions", which makes it easier for people to use while reducing headaches and search times that could be spent doing something productive.

Also it keeps all those pages in one(you know what I mean...) page so you don't have Firefox20^ or any of that