I am re-posting this on behalf of Ripintou, who is now stationed in Baghdad:

Hello Christine (Crimson) ALL

(Unclassified)

Well I got to Baghdad safe despite the combat landing by a C-130. Living in a tent with all the comforts of home, a bed and a locker ... laugh.

I work mostly during the night so sleeping during the day is a challenge by itself. Very dusty here even the sky is dirty, I'll be glad to breath the Phoenix pollution as a relief.

Big mission here maintaining stability to the region. We get attacked a lot and we're under constant vigilance, though we return the favor 10 fold!

Most of what we get hit by are mortars and rockets. Apache helicopters everywhere supporting the mission here, they're usually the ones taking out the insurgents. There are many Special Forces/Mercs here that infiltrate any well dug-in insurgents that are also a threat. We use a triangulation system to trace any fired projectile in the Baghdad area, this locates the exact position that it was fired from, thus the enemy is killed. We wear a lot of gear and we have to wear it everywhere.

Every day there are patriot details for those that wish to attend for our fallen comrades, unfortunately there is no respawning!

All the Guys/Gals in n00bstories/Official Renegade Forums, Non00bs etc ... Keep the home front warm for me/us and keep the great game/forums alive. Kill the cheaters and smack the spammers!!!

Next time I write I will try to include some images. Miss all of you ...

Take Care

RipintoU (Dave)
