AIM only sucks because it doesn't log things automatically, there are no tabbed IM windows, and there's no message pop-up windows. But by that logic, AIM only sucks compared to using Trillian for your AIM contacts. Personally, I was pretty happy using AIM with DeadAIM. Then when Trillian v3.0 came out, my friend finally convinced me to try it. Trillian v3.0 really is a vast improvement in stability and features compared to the older releases. I was impressed. So impressed, in fact, that I use Trillian to this day.

But anyway, back on (sub-)topic. . . AIM would be great if it, by default, had all the features DeadAIM, Messenger:Mate, or Trillian have. But by itself, it's pretty nice, if not butt-ugly. Particularly v5.9xx and up. . . Yeesh. Total Italics Count: 14 >_> <_<
